INULIN

It is a dietary fiber derived from chicory which is not metabolized by the body and therefore does not provide calories. Thanks to its composition, it acts as a prebiotic and promotes the rebalancing of the bacterial flora by optimally regulating the functions of the intestine.

PSYLLIUM

The seeds of this plant are indicated for the treatment of constipation and slow intestinal transit because they have a mucilaginous coating capable of absorbing large amounts of water and swelling. Therefore, it promotes the regularity of intestinal transit by ensuring normal stool consistency and volume and exerting a prebiotic and soothing emollient effect on the digestive system.

CONCENTRATED PLUM JUICE

Plum juice is a natural laxative that helps regulate intestinal transit. Its action is due to the fact that plums are fruits rich in fiber, but also in sorbitol, a sugar which is not absorbed by our body and which, by osmosis, attracts water into the intestinal lumen.
